Defendant told police he 'felt threatened'

By BEN BROWN
The Daily Journal

In a videotaped interview with police, Caleb Flitcroft said he fired into a group of people at his girlfriend's birthday party in November of 2005, because he felt threatened by three men who he said had attacked him moments before.

Flitcroft fired seven times into the group, killing his girlfriend, Brittany Syfert, who would have turned 20 two days later, and wounding one other man. Flitcroft is charged with first-degree murder in Syfert's death.

"I think I felt threatened," he said on the video. "I felt I needed to do something."

Mendocino County Sheriff's Detective James Schnitzes and Lt.

D.J. Miller interviewed Flitcroft hours after the shooting took place during Syfert's birthday party in Potter Valley.

Competitive fishing lures local angler

By ZACK SAMPSEL
The Daily Journal

On any given weekend, while most of us sleep and darkness fills the sky at 3 a.m., local semi-pro bass fisherman Dan Kornegay, 32, and his partner are putting their boat in the water preparing for just another day of competition.

"Fishing is just a release for me, and competing added a new dimension for me," Kornegay said. "Fishing is a learning sport.

The most important thing you can do is to keep doing it. Win or lose, I get satisfaction from trying."

And it's the never-give-up attitude that keeps Kornegay humble and hungry. Kornegay, an Arizona native, moved to Mendocino County in 1980 and has called this area home since then. Now, 27 years later, he spends his days working for Caltrans as an equipment operator while also balancing his family life and fishing.

Kornegay has a family of three, including his wife of nearly 10 years, Dana, and two daughters, Kylie, 5, and Kenzie,

Public help sought in child sexual assault case

The Daily Journal

The Mendocino County Sheriff's Office is asking for the public's help in identifying any possible victims of alleged child molester Kenneth Davidson, 65, of Redwood Valley.

Davidson was arrested on suspicion of continuous sexual abuse of a child on Tuesday, following an investigation by Mendocino and Napa County sheriff's detectives.

Davidson allegedly sexually assaulted a 6-year-old Angwine girl in both Mendocino and Napa counties. Detectives learned about the situation when the girl came forward to the Napa County

UKIAH CITY COUNCIL

Hearing set for discussion of Myron rezoning

The Daily Journal

The Ukiah City Council will hold a public hearing on the proposed rezoning of the land at 617 Myron St. at 6 p.m. Aug. 15 at the Ukiah Civic Center, 300 Seminary Ave.

The Ukiah Planning Commission, on July 27, unanimously approved a recommendation for the City Council to take action on the rezoning of the land.

The land is currently split into two parcels, but the proposed rezoning would divide the area into four parcels with square footage ranging from 4,000 to 10,000 square feet. A driveway going through the center of the lot would provide access to the four parcels while remaining consistent with the design and architecture of the surrounding neighborhood.

The proposed plan would retain the existing home on the lot while adding four

MCSO arrests mother in suspected child kidnapping

The Daily Journal

The Mendocino County Sheriff's Office arrested a Massachusetts woman Wednesday afternoon on charges that she abducted her biological child.

According to sheriff's reports, deputies learned that Julia B. Darling, 27, of Cambridge, Mass. was believed to be in the Bell Springs area of northern Mendocino County.

Darling was wanted on a Massachusetts state warrant for allegedly abducting her 4-year-old child more than a year ago.

Sheriff's deputies investigated leads and talked with Darling and her boyfriend, Michael Repucci, at the Leggett Post Office. Darling had the child with her at that time.

She was arrested on a warrant for suspicion of non-custodial parental kidnapping and booked into the Mendocino County Jail, where she is awaiting extradition to Massachusetts.

Repucci was arrested on suspicion of being part of a criminal conspiracy, and was booked into jail on a $35,000 bond.

CORRECTIONS

•Friday's Page 1 article, "Jury deadlocked; mistrial declared" should have stated that the jury voted 11-1 to acquit Mark Parker and 10-2 to convict Memo Parker.

•The community brief regarding the benefit for Hailie Lewis published in Friday's edition incorrectly stated that the money raised will be used for medical costs. The money raised during the benefit will be used only to cover moving costs so that the family can be closer to the hospital, lost wages and travel expenses.

•The Community Chatter column published July 27 should have indicated that Richard Lewis was the general manager of Applebees, not the owner.

The Ukiah Daily Journal reserves this space to correct errors or make clarifications to news articles. Significant errors in obituary notices or birth announcements will result in reprinting the entire article. Errors may be reported to the editor, 468-3526.

Savior emerges for attraction simulating Jerusalem in Orlando

By TRAVIS REED

The Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. -- Jesus Christ is crucified and resurrected here six days a week.

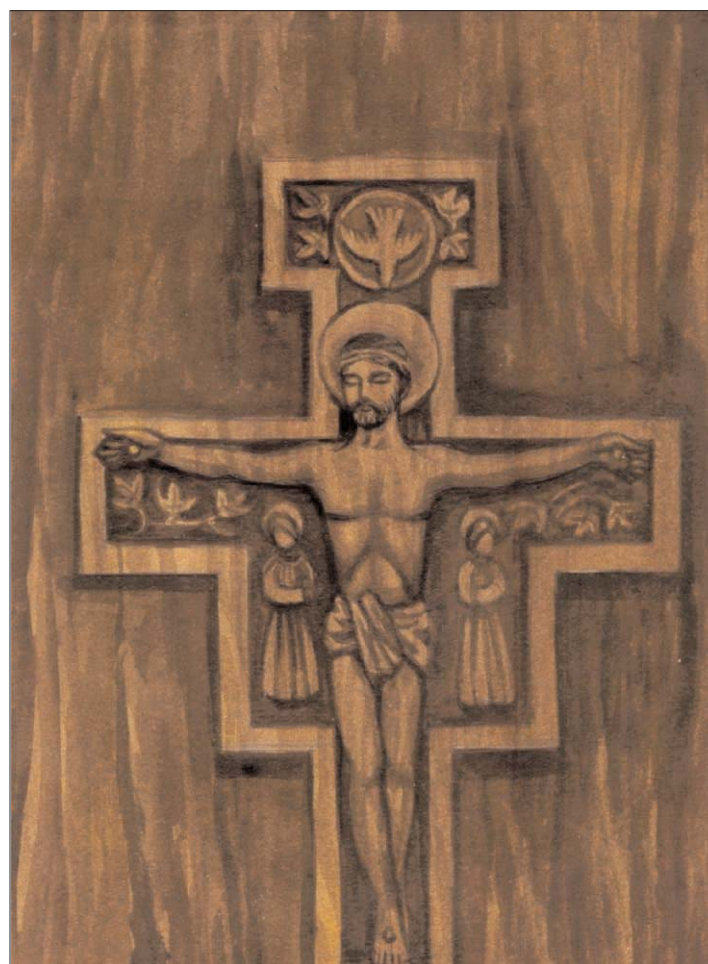

Snarling Roman soldiers whip and drag him, and somber audience members watch. Some quietly weep at a pageant bloody and cruel.

It is the grand finale at the Holy Land Experience, and not the attraction most tourists envision in an Orlando vacation. Just miles from Walt Disney World, Universal Orlando and SeaWorld in this city's overstimulated tourist corridor, Holy Land has in its six years of operation aimed to recreate Jerusalem of Biblical times.

It is often referred to as a "Christian theme park," but the park offers lectures, not rides, making it feel more like a trip to church. Its officers prefer to call it a "living Biblical museum" and until last month, the nonprofit operation was troubled. Management changed hands, its founder left and attendance was flat. But suddenly, a savior appeared.

Trinity Broadcasting Network, a California-based Christian empire with 12,500 worldwide TV and cable affiliates, took over Holy Land and its estimated $8 million mortgage. Both are nonprofit organizations, so Trinity describes the deal as a "marriage" rather than a purchase, saying little money changed hands.

Already, ticket sales are up 25 percent, owing to mentions on the new parent's broadcasts, and an expansion is planned. It will include new shows, a general freshening and a new Trinity television studio, where movies and TV shows will be filmed and furnish even more publicity.

"We believe that the way this came together it was designed by God for us to continue the way we need to," park president Tom Powell said. "I don't think the end result is because of anything any person did. I think it's the end result of what everyone here was asking for."

Holy Land previously had almost no advertising budget, relying on word-of-mouth testimonials and tourists who happened to drive by.

The park has a "scriptorium," an opulent-looking building with an enormous collection of rare Bibles and artifacts. Powell said it is the largest of its kind outside the Vatican.

Other stops include a scale model of Jerusalem, an exhibit on the Dead Sea Scrolls and a model of the garden tomb where Christ was supposedly buried.

Vendors and actors wear head coverings and billowing cotton rags, and gift shops sell Bibles and other Christian items. Among them are a genealogical map linking Adam to Jesus, handbags, necklaces and T-shirts. It also sells yarmulkes and menorahs -- a nod to its founder.

The attraction opened in 2001, the vision of a New Jersey preacher who came South to expand his reach. It was controversial because the Rev. Marvin Rosenthal is a Baptist born Jewish, and now considers himself a "Hebrew Christian" or "Messianic Jew." That means he believes Jesus is the Messiah, contrary to traditional Jewish beliefs. Some local Jews were upset he was creating an attraction, and their conflict made international news when the park started.

"We were given tremendous promotion by the fact that there were a few voices that didn't want to see us open the facility," Rosenthal said. "Consequently, the media got wind of that and I wound up being on most of the networks. Good Morning America, Good Night America, Good Afternoon America, The O'Reilly Factor. I had people coming from Russia, from Israel, from South America, from Europe. Out of that event we received what had to be many millions of dollars worth of publicity."

Rosenthal left Holy Land two years ago, saying it was simply time to move on. He now runs a Clermont-based ministry called Zion's Hope and has no contact with the park.

Trinity didn't intend to get into the Biblical attraction business, but was looking for an Orlando location for a new TV production studio, chief of staff Paul Crouch Jr. said.

Now the organization will build it at Holy Land, and could make TV and movie filming a part of the guest experience.

"We can use the Holy Land Experience as a backlot,

Wanted: Authenticity in Iraq

Editor's note: Nat Hentoff is on vacation. His column will return Aug. 11.

Authenticity. That's what the YouTubers said they were trying to elicit when they submitted video questions for the Democratic debate. They were hoping to get past the candidates' canned answers, to catch a glimpse of the person behind the glib comments.

Good luck on that.

Authenticity's in short supply these days, especially on the subject of the war in Iraq. Both out on the campaign trail and in the halls of Congress, the aim is to score political points rather than shape public policy.

Look at what happened in the recent Senate debate. Before the Defense Department legislation went to the floor, Republicans started peeling away from the president on Iraq. Thoughtful members of both parties sought ways to actually effect a change in policy.

But as Republicans worked with some Democrats to craft their amendments, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., suddenly pulled the rug out from under them. He staged an all-night session; demanded a vote on a Democratic proposal for total troop withdrawal by April 2008; then, when his party lost, as Reid knew it would, he announced there would be no more votes on Iraq. The next day he saw in newspapers exactly the headline he wanted: "Republicans Block Senate Vote on Iraq Troop Withdrawal."

Someone who authentically wanted to alter administration policy would have welcomed the chance to work with two powerful former committee chairmen, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and John Warner, R-Va., to produce a proposal the White House and Defense Department would be forced to take seriously. But Reid was determined to deny Republican Senate candidates a vote against current Iraq policy. He chose instead to play to the Democratic base's demand for immediate troop withdrawal, even though he knew he would not be accomplishing that end.

All of the Democratic candidates for president in the Senate voted with their party. But at the YouTube debate they admitted that withdrawal by next April would be impossible.

Sen. Hillary Clinton, D-N.Y., said withdrawal will be complicated, that it will take many months. "We don't want more loss of American life and Iraqi life as we attempt to withdraw." Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., amplified, "It's time to start to tell the truth." That truth, said the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, is that if withdrawal started today it would take at least a year to get 160,000 troops out of Iraq. Hello? What was that Senate vote?

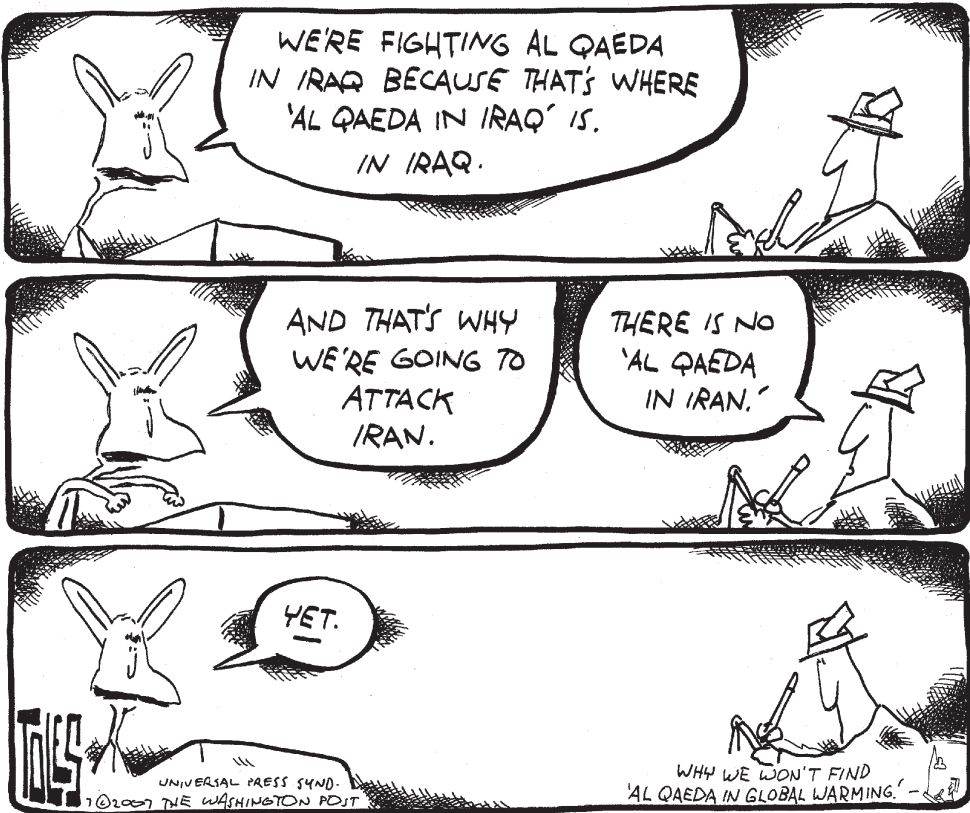

In Biden's defense, he was the only one of the candidates who responded to the YouTube debate's quirky format in the spirit intended. By having "ordinary Americans" send in videotaped questions, CNN, which broadcast the exchange, and the Democratic Party, which sanctioned it, expected to learn what voters really care about. Those voters said they wanted to get past the candidates' talking points. We have a lot of sympathy for that. For years, we've tried to coax politicians into saying something real. Any attempt at unearthing authenticity is welcome.

But for the most part, the debate failed in that effort. Only when a gun enthusiast referred to his automatic weapon as his "baby" and Biden responded, "If that is his baby, he needs help," did we see a flash of realism while the other candidates gave tortured answers to their positions on gun control.

At the end of the debate, a questioner asked the Democrats to tell the audience something good and something bad about the person standing to their left: "And remember, be honest." Honesty quickly fell victim to the candidates' gushy compliments about one another. John Edwards, whose wife has championed him as a women's advocate, commented on Clinton's clothes as a humorous way to say something negative, leaving Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., to defend the New York senator's sartorial style. Would this happen to a male candidate? Maybe there was a bit of authenticity in that exchange.

But the honest answer came again from Biden: "I think this is a ridiculous exercise." He's right. But it was a harmless one. The exercise in the Senate was not. There the Democrats owe it to the troops to make an authentic attempt to deal with the war in Iraq.

No easy answers

To the Editor:

As a long time Democrat and former Chair of the Mendocino County Democratic Central Committee, I have been following the debate over Iraq in Washington with growing dismay. The Democratic leadership as misread the results of our recent electoral victory. My voting intent was not in support of a precipitous pull out based on arbitrary time lines. This ostrich approach promises serious and lethal consequences. Rather, I am interested in having our leaders develop the best strategy for success. Any strategy should consider the needs of both the American and Iraqi people. It needs to take into account all aspects of our dismal situation. It does no good to punish the Bushies, Republicans, or Democrats for their egregious mistakes. Yes, except for a few true believers we supported the invasion; it is disingenuous to pretend we did not.

The question becomes what to do now. It is time to stop the finger pointing and grow up. Recently, a senator made the suggestion that the President take a look at David McCullough's book on Truman. The Democrats should take a look at Robert Caro's book on Lyndon Johnson in the Senate. Here, the Democrats provide leadership for the country in the area of civil rights for a Republican president. It is time for Democrats to rise beyond partisan politics and rethink our badly failed war on terror strategy. There are no easy answers. Rhetoric will provide no answers! Let's take a look at the course suggested by Lee Hamilton as some suggest. Or maybe Joe Biden's approach is correct. It may be possible to develop a new and unthought of approach. It is time to stop the squabbling and take this situation seriously. The time for posturing is over. Harry and Nancy need to act like leaders or maybe get new leaders some vision.

The issue is not who will win in 08, rather it is what kind of nation are we. Awful mistakes have been made by our leadership. It is time to step up and help our nation into a future fraught with serious national and international problems. We have to gain traction on Iraq, the environment and health care. We need leadership, not tired divisive politics. That is what got us here. The Rovian politics of wedge issues invite equally divisive responses. I believe the party of Truman and Roosevelt can rise to the challenge.

To the Editor:

I plan to submit a petition to the Mendocino County Board of Supervisors re: "Medical Marijuana Cultivation Ordinance"

You who agree with the following need to plan to attend the afternoon Board meeting on Tuesday August 7. I, and other concerned individuals, see the use and abuse of marijuana as the altering of one's consciousness and impairment to the sensibilities of our community. We ask for you support!

We also feel that Compassionate Use Proposition 215 and subsequent medical marijuana measures are consistently being abused without being addressed by Sheriff Tom Allman, or D.A. Meredith Lintott.

We demand that the Mendocino County Board of Supervisors adopt the State of California guidelines of six plants and limit the caregivers to growing for four clients.

We also demand that the caregivers obtain a valid business license from the County of Mendocino, and further demand that the caregivers or individual growers adhere to the reporting of income to county, state, and federal tax structures.

The following are breaches of current law: 1. Drug Sales; 2. The sharing of medication; 3. Driving impaired; 4. Operating without a business license; 5. Failure to report income.

It is felt that without these guidelines, the Board of Supervisors and law enforcement perpetuate lawlessness on our fellow citizens, neighborhoods, and communities.

I have attended most of the criminal justice committee meeting of the Board. Abusive growers are there in numbers, full of distorted rationales.

We need you to give a final message to the Board, that enough is enough! We want positive action today. Write your letters to the BOS at 501 Low Gap Road, Ukiah, today. Or call 485-7915 Do not wait on this request.

Arnold no promise keeper

As the Aug. 6 fourth anniversary of Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger's first declaration for political office approaches, it's never been more clear that beneath his veneer of entertaining public appearances and politically correct causes, the governor is not much of a promise keeper.

Yes, Schwarzenegger has been the most spectacular performer Californians are ever likely to see in Sacramento. Would predecessor Gray Davis have hoisted the precious silver Stanley Cup high overhead during the Anaheim Ducks' victory celebration? Could Pete Wilson have staged a tour of Canada featuring provincial premiers slaving to be photographed with him? Could even Jerry Brown make negotiations over a health care plan seem entertaining? The answer to all these questions is no.

And yet...California is far deeper in debt than it was when Schwarzenegger took office. The structural political problems that soured voters on government and prompted them to elect a musclemen actor who couldn't even pronounce the name of the state are still present. The promises Schwarzenegger made as he ran for office both in the recall election of 2003 and last year's regular election have not been kept.

Schwarzenegger, for example, decried political fund-raising and vowed to work to end a practice he correctly said invites corruption.

But he's done nothing of the sort. Instead, he sets new records each year for fund-raising during those questionable periods, insisting he can't be corrupted - but making sure his donors' interests are well looked after. In fact, his top staff now double-dips to the extent they get more of their income from donor-funded campaign committees than in state salary. Who do they really work for? The people of California or the people and companies that pay the bulk of their salaries?

Notorious as he was for constant fund-raising that led to accusations he sold public policy for campaign donations, Davis never permitted any double-dipping by his aides. No wonder Susan Kennedy, cabinet secretary under Davis, looks happier these days as Schwarzenegger's chief of staff. She's paid more than twice as much.

As if he couldn't remember his own actions, Schwarzenegger vowed in October 2003 to hire a private investigator to look into his admitted groping of women during his film and body-building career. He never did.

He vowed to balance the state budget and eliminate the structural budget deficit that has plagued the last few governors. And he pledged to slow the pace of increased state government spending.

But he hasn't come close to balancing a single budget, instead sinking California almost $100 million further into debt with the bonds he's sponsored. When he exhorted voters to back $15 billion in "budget balancing" bonds in 2004, he pledged that if they passed, he would "throw away the credit card."

But that credit card was actively swiped last year, as $38 billion in infrastructure bonds passed, and again this year when Schwarzenegger and the Legislature enacted a $15 billion prison bond without so much as asking the voters to approve. Now he wants to pass another $40 billion in bonds next year.

Altogether, that would $108 billion in new debt, plus about $100 billion in interest to be paid over the next 30 years. That's an average of about $7 billion per year added to the state's structural deficit for the next three decades. Now Schwarzenegger would like to pass $40 billion in new water project bonds next year. When he was governor, Jerry Brown liked to remind reporters that "there is no free lunch." But Schwarzenegger appears to believe that's what bonds are, with voters and legislators following him like sheep so far, despite any promises he's made.

Then there's the pace of state spending, which rose an average of 7 percent yearly under Davis and has soared by 8 percent each year Schwarzenegger has been in office. Not exactly a cut in the rate of spending increases.

Republican Schwarzenegger promised to "blow up boxes" in Sacramento, but has become cozier with legislators and lobbyists - even Democrats - than Davis or Wilson ever was. But almost no voters are even slightly aware of any of this. All they see is glitz, with every Schwarzenegger appearance carefully arranged for top production values, just like his movies.

No one knows whether the promise of cutting greenhouse gases that lead to global warming will be kept, either. The shape of his carbon credit exchange plan remains unknown and the devil is always in the details. The same for his promise of universal health care, still far from reality.

It all adds up to a governor who keeps few, if any, promises, whether public or personal. And none of it interferes in the slightest with his popularity or his image at home and abroad. Which marks Schwarzenegger as one of the most skilled politicians the planet has ever seen, even if he sets few records for honesty.

almost like Universal Studios does. It'll be a faith-based version of Universal Studios," Crouch said. "We can shoot movies there, we can do concerts, we can do TV shows."

Holy Land's offerings change regularly, many of them outdoor shows. Recent performances range from The Ministry of Jesus, a 15-minute act where Christ heals a blind man and inspires a tax collector, to a 30-minute Southern gospel concert and the resurrection itself.

Audience members are encouraged to participate. Jesus walked among them with a wireless microphone, calling children and picking one up. Excited parents with digital and disposable cameras crept forward as their kids fidgeted and kicked at sand.

Lisa Bell, 42, husband David Bell, 50, and their 2-year-old son came from Ripley, Tenn., after seeing Holy Land on Trinity. She said they didn't consider attending the other parks.

"Oh no, Jesus was just holding him," Lisa Bell said, nodding to her sunburned son. "He knows who Jesus is."

The park relies heavily on donations from benefactors, foundations and visitors slipping money into boxes scattered around the park. Ticket sales doesn't cover costs. Admission prices have risen from less than $20 originally to $35 to $40 today.

Carmichael brings new speed to flip-happy X Games

Associated Press Writer

CARSON — The X Games are a place for tricks, not speed.

That's their reputation anyway.

But with the thrilling introduction of Rally Car racing last year, and this year's new invention Moto X racing, velocity has taken its place alongside Vert.

Organizers have brought in Ricky Carmichael, the Michael Jordan of motocross, as a consultant and competitor in Moto X racing, which debuts Saturday at the Home Depot Center.

It's a leaner, quicker, more TV-friendly version of classic supercross. Along with Carmichael's presence it lends a new credibility to motor sports at the X Games, which motorcycle purists have knocked as a showplace for bright lights and back flips.

Five years ago, Carmichael never imagined taking part in the X Games.

"But as you can see, it's getting more race-generated," Carmichael said. "I think it's a change of the tide. I've been in this game so long it's exciting to have something new."

Carmichael, a 27-year-old from Havana, Fla., has won every AMA motocross title he's competed for since 1997 and is a five-time premier-class supercross champion.

One win away from 150 AMA victories, he's now in semiretirement, riding in only 16 events this year. He is a fledgling NASCAR driver and has a developmental deal with Ginn Racing under Mark Martin.

Carmichael will face 11 other competitors in Saturday's newfangled event.

Tim Reed, the X Games' director of sports and competition, said organizers have tried to have racing and freestyle represented in every sport, just as they have done in the Winter X Games with skiing and snowboarding.

"In motocross, we've got a lot of the freestyle," Reed said. "It wasn't that far of a stretch to make a reach into the racing side."

Supercross has as many as 20 racers in a heat, and the result can be a chaotic confusion for viewers.

"A lot of times in a long event it kind of gets spread out, and it kind of gets a little monotonous and boring," Carmichael said. "This is going to be much more aggressive."

Moto X racing will have short, four-man heats, with six riders in the final — the four winners and two winners from "last chance" qualifying heats. A 12-lap final will determine the winner.

Carmichael said that although he had a say in how the new sport would work, he didn't design something he could easily win.

"It makes it tougher on a guy like me who strives for the longer races," he said. "But I'm willing to sacrifice that to get this sport to grow."

No one represents the new emphasis on speed more than current X Games darling Travis Pastrana, who opted out of his specialty events — Moto X Freestyle and Moto X Best Trick — in favor of Rally Car racing, where he won gold last year, Car and Moto X racing, where he hopes to repeat the feat.

Pastrana said he's happy the motorized world where he grew up as a teenager is embracing the showcase that made him famous in his 20s.

"I don't really think our motorcycle industry understands how big it is. The main hardcore race enthusiasts were like 'Oh, X Games they're all about the jumping,'" Pastrana said. "Now I'm seeing some of the motocross enthusiasts and the reporters and the magazines here.

"You already have heroes established in that sport. You have guys like Ricky Carmichael, Chad Reed, Kevin Windham; they have such a big following globally."

Windham and Reed will compete alongside Carmichael and Pastrana, who after his Rally Car victory last year and his stunning stunts elsewhere will be considered a contender in any event.

But he has spent very little time on a motorcycle lately.

"I haven't been riding hard-ly at all; I'm quite a bit out of shape," he said. "The last couple days I've been riding I had a few good diggers and a couple front flips — unintentional front flips."

Raiders hope practice makes perfect for WR Mike Williams

Williams admits this could be his 'last chance' to succeed in the NFL

By JOSH DUBOW

AP Sports Writer

NAPA — Twice in a span of three plays Mike Williams worked his way free from star cornerback Nnamdi Asomugha near the goal line and caught a pass from Josh McCown for a touchdown.

Earlier, Williams made a juggling catch in the end zone for another score. It may only be training camp, but Williams is showing signs of why he was so heralded when he came out of college two years ago. But after the struggles Williams endured his first two seasons in the NFL when he was in Detroit, he's not about to put too much stock into his practice at a hotel field in California's wine country.

"It's practice, man," Williams said Friday at the Oakland Raiders' training camp facility. "I don't really look too much into it. That's all it is practice. We were just fortunate enough the ball came out at the right time and I was able to make a play."

Williams made few of those in his two seasons with the Lions, when he clashed with coaches, was late to meetings and did not meet weight targets set by the team. He had 29 catches for 350 yards and one touchdown as a rookie, before playing sparingly last season under new offensive coordinator Mike Martz.

and even fell behind McCown, a quarterback, on the depth chart at receiver at one point. The Lions finally parted ways with Williams in April, sending him and McCown to the Raiders for a fourth-round draft choice.

He then injured his hamstring in his first minicamp practice with the Raiders in May, and missed the rest of the offseason workouts. Coach Lane Kiffin, who was Williams' position coach in college at Southern California, said the receiver still has work to do to get into shape.

But the weight target the Raiders have set for him of 235 pounds is 15 more than the Lions wanted him to weigh and better suits his style. Williams said too much was made of his weight in Detroit and said more time should have been spent developing him as a player.

"If they had spent as much time doing that as they did magnifying the things that didn't relate to football as much ..." he said. "But that's in the past. I'm here, Kiff hasn't given me some outstanding weight I haven't seen since high school like Detroit. It's just one less thing I have to worry about."

Williams showed that his size can be an advantage during some of the drills Friday. He used his 6-foot-5

Lions sign Calvin Johnson to 6-year deal, ending wide receiver's holdout

NFL teams are gearing up for the new season

By The Associated Press

Calvin Johnson ended his eight-day holdout Friday and it wasn't long before the No. 2 pick in the NFL draft was working with the Detroit Lions' first team.

The wide receiver from Georgia Tech signed a six-year contract just in time for an 8:30 a.m. practice, the Lions' first public workout.

"We choreographed that pretty well, didn't we?" Lions chief operating officer Tom Lewand joked.

The 500 fans in attendance cheered when they realized Johnson was on the field. Applause followed every catch he made in the two-hour practice.

"I thought today went pretty well," Johnson said. "I made some mistakes, but I was able to retain a lot of what I picked up in (offseason team activities)."

And it made sense he was working with the starters right away.

"I wasn't surprised. I was expecting to be out there with the first team," Johnson said. "That's why they picked me at No. 2."

Johnson caught 78 passes for 1,202 yards and 15 touchdowns during his All-America junior season, and he won the Biletnikoff Award, given to the nation's top college receiver.

Johnson is expected to team with Roy Williams and Mike Furrey to give the Lions a triple-threat receiving corps.

"I have a very good feeling about this group," Lions coach Rod Marinelli said. "We've got some very special players on this field."

Marinelli expects Johnson to affect Detroit's rushing attack.

"When we have those three men on the field, and especially when we add Shaun McDonald as a fourth receiver, it is going to force defenses to spread themselves wide," he said. "That's going to open up a lot of room for Tatum Bell or Kevin Jones."

The Lions placed quarterback Drew Stanton, their second-round pick, on injured reserve with a knee injury.

Broncos Linebacker Warrick Holdman was released from the hospital Friday, 24 hours after being treated for a spinal cord concussion following a collision with a teammate at training camp.

"He did have some numbness this morning but not a lot," coach Mike Shanahan said.

The Broncos didn't say when Holdman, who spent the night at Sky Ridge Medical Center, would be able to practice again.

Holdman was injured Thursday when he tried to tackle running back Mike Bell, who lowered his left shoulder and struck the 243-pound linebacker in the crown of his helmet. Holdman crumpled to the grass and temporarily lost feeling in his extremities, although he could move his arms and legs by the time he was taken off the field to an ambulance.

Browns

Right offensive tackle Ryan Tucker was suspended for the first four games of the season for violating the NFL's policy on anabolic steroids and related substances.

Tucker admitted taking a banned substance, saying he did so while being treated for a mental disorder that limited him to nine games last season.

Tucker can practice with the Browns through training camp and the preseason. However, he cannot be with the team during his suspension, which begins Sept. 1 and runs through Oct. 1. He is not appealing the ban.

Bengals

Free agent tight end Erik Jensen signed a one-year deal, adding depth to the Bengals' most depleted position. Cincinnati has lost three reserve tight ends to injury since training camp began.

Jensen was a seventh-round pick by St. Louis in 2004 and spent his rookie season on injured reserve. He was on the 49ers' and Steelers' practice squads in 2005. He didn't play last season after Dallas waived him on Aug. 23.

Giants

Seven-time Pro Bowl defensive end Michael Strahan probably will release a statement on his holdout over the weekend, according to his agent. Strahan, 35, failed to report to training camp a week ago, hours after agent Tony Agnone stunned the Giants by telling them that Strahan was considering retirement after 14 NFL seasons.

There has been speculation that Strahan, who was scheduled to earn $4 million this season, is holding out in an effort to renegotiate his contract after losing a bitter divorce case that cost him $15.3 million.

Bills

Reserve defensive tackle John McCargo is out indefinitely after straining an abdominal muscle during a training camp practice. Buffalo coach Dick Jauron couldn't estimate how much practice time McCargo will miss, saying only "We hope it won't be long." It's not clear when McCargo was hurt, but he continued watching practice from the sideline with his stomach heavily wrapped.

Bucs

ed fashion Friday afternoon after sitting out Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday morning. Petitgout, signed as a free agent in March, started nine games for the New York Giants before breaking a leg against Chicago on Nov. 12 and missing the remainder of last season.

Titans

Defensive end Simeon Rice's tour of NFL teams brought him to Tennessee's headquarters Friday, and he was gone after a few hours.

Titans general manager Mike Reinfeldt said the team gave Rice a physical exam, and he and coach Jeff Fisher met with the 12-year veteran.

Rice, who also took a physical with the New York Giants on Wednesday, is expected to meet with other teams.

Tampa Bay waived Rice last week because of an injured shoulder. His 121 sacks are second only to New York Giants defensive end Michael Strahan's 132 1/2 among active players.

Rams

Linebacker Chris Draft, who has been suffering from an asthma-like condition, practiced Friday. Draft, who signed as a free agent after making 107 tackles for Carolina last season, had been out since early in his first workout on July 27. He was cleared to practice after being examined Thursday.

Bowyer hopes for spot in NASCAR's title chase

By DAN GELSTON
AP Sports Writer
LONG POND, Pa. — Some of the drivers in the hunt for the Chase are household names, mixing in winning races with radio mags, photos on the pages of gossip magazines, and known by one-word nicknames.

Then there's Clint Bowyer. The media spotlight and massive fan base isn't the only part of racing that separates Bowyer from some of the other heavyweights in the top 12. Bowyer has yet to find a way to Victory Lane.

Not this year. Not ever in a Nextel Cup race.

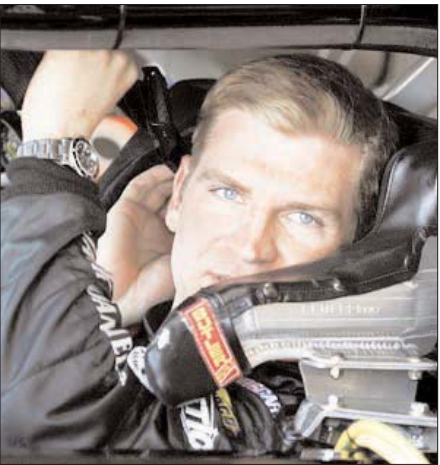

"It would mean a lot to win anywhere, I don't care where we're at," Bowyer said.

Bowyer might best be remembered for skidding across the finish line with his car upside down and on fire in this year's Daytona 500.

As much as Bowyer wants to win — and taking the checkered flag at Pocono Raceway would provide a needed boost — what he really hopes for is to keep a spot in the top 12 when the 10-race Chase begins.

"We have to stay consistent and keep doing what we're doing because that's what got us this far," Bowyer said before qualifying Friday. "Hopefully, that will get us in the Chase. I think that will be good enough to get us in the Chase if we don't have any trouble."

Bowyer has found little of that this season, finishing all 20 races and avoiding the costly crashes or faulty parts failures that have seemed to plague nearly every other driver. But his season has been far from spectacular, with one top five finish (Sonoma) and only 79 laps led.

Driver Clint Bowyer.

That's been enough to keep him in contention, but not a serious threat for the title.

"We've got to find that next step where we're running in the top five, finishing in the top five and racing for a win," Bowyer said. "We've ran in the top five several times, we just haven't gotten that finish."

Bowyer is stumped why he can't drive the No. 07 Chevrolet to Victory Lane. But if he has any shot of competing for the championship, his Richard Childress Racing team needs to find a quick answer.

"We have to get in the top five. We have to start racing for wins," he said.

While the drivers' point totals were reset in five-point increments when the postseason began in previous seasons, all drivers' totals this year will be reset to 5,000, and each will receive a 10-point bonus for each victory during the first 26 races.

"The big thing is to get as many wins as you can get before the Chase starts to get those bonus points," said Tony Stewart, fifth in the standings. "Whether you're first or 12th it doesn't matter. It's how many races can you win and get those 10 extra bonus points."

That puts Bowyer at a severe disadvantage if he keeps his place in the field over the next six races. Bowyer and Dale Earnhardt Jr., who sits in the 12th and final spot, are the only two drivers in the field who haven't won a race this season, which would put them in the back of the field.

The field also was expanded from 10 to 12 drivers this year.

"Once you get in that Chase, you better start running for a championship and win a championship," Bowyer said. "Hopefully we can find what we're missing there and start going for broke."

With former champs like Jeff Gordon, Tony Stewart, Matt Kenseth and Jimmie Johnson all in the top 12, Bowyer would be chasing the title against an experienced group that knows how to win down the stretch.

"You're part of an elite group," Bowyer said. "You've been given that opportunity. Now you've got to take care of it."

Maybe a Nextel Cup title will force people to pay attention to Bowyer. With Junior talking to a mosh pit of media only four haulers down on Friday, Bowyer amicably chatted in front of a couple of cameras and maybe seven or eight writers.

So far, the notoriety has eluded the Kansan as much as a trip to Victory Lane.

"It doesn't bother me one bit," Bowyer said.

Bowyer finished with four top fives last season, but lacked the overall consistency he's had this season, and finished 17th in the final standings.

Bowyer said he predicted that this would be the season he would finish in the Chase, and maybe even gain some attention from the NASCAR community. He's not even the biggest name in the RCR stable with most of the attention focused on veterans Kevin Harvick and Jeff Burton.

Burton is fourth in the standings. "When we're struggling, they'll come over and help me out," he said.

Only next week's race on the road course at Watkins Glen concerns Bowyer over the final six races. He keeps an eye on the standings and knows the fight for the final few spots is so tight that only one or two bad races over the final six of the "regular season" could knock him out of a spot.

Nothing would be sweeter for Bowyer than winning his first race and championship in the same season.

"If you're not one of those 12 cars come Chase time, you're working on next year," he said.

Sabbatini builds 2-shot lead, and will settle for par on the weekend

By DOUG FERGUSON
AP Golf Writer
AKRON, Ohio — Rory Sabbatini is taking all bets that par golf on the weekend at Firestone will pay him $1.35 million.

Sabbatini continued to make a difficult golf course look like a breeze Friday, running off three straight birdies toward the end of his round for another 3-under 67 and a two-shot lead over Masters champion Zach Johnson in the Bridgestone Invitational.

What appeared to be a tuneup for the final major of the season next week at the PGA Championship is starting to look like it might be an even tougher test. Sabbatini was at 6-under 134, with only seven other players able to break par.

Five-time champion Tiger Woods was one of them after an even-par 70 in which he had no complaints until reaching the green. He made only two birdies despite hitting 15 greens in regulation, and those were wiped out by a pair of three-putts from about 35 feet in which he left the first putt some 8 feet short of the hole.

"They looked fast, but for some reason they putted a little bit slower than I thought they did (Thursday)," Woods said. "I just had a hard time making the adjustment."

He was at 138 along with Scott Verplank (68) and Kenny Perry, who had his second straight 69. Someone asked Sabbatini if two more rounds at 67 would be good enough to win, and the spunky South African was almost speechless.

"On the weekend?" he said.

"I'd take that with that $1.35 million in a heartbeat. If I shoot 12 under, I'm winning. There's no doubt in my mind. The way I look at it, I'd take even money right now shooting even par on the weekend. The course is only going to get tougher."

For once, not many could argue with him. Johnson and Davis Love III had the best round of the tournament at 65, proving that it could be done. Love wound up in the group at 139 that included Lee Westwood and Chris DiMarco. Johnson attributed his score to hitting fairways and making a bunch of putts, his recipe for winning at Augusta National. Indeed, the greens felt as quick as they are at the Masters, although Johnson had another major on his mind.

"Some of the guys were joking around at lunch that this is one of those courses where if the U.S. Open needed an emergency course, I think you could probably come here within a week's time," he said.

Paul Casey and Hunter Mahan, who shared the first-round lead with Sabbatini, both sputtered. Mahan didn't make a birdie until the final hole in his round of 73, while Casey got hung up in the rough on the 18th on his way to a double bogey to also shoot 73. They were at 140.

Sabbatini was headed in that direction, especially after finding the rough left of the 14th fairway and taking bogey. But he holed a 20-foot birdie putt on the par-3 15th, wisely laid up on the 16th and made a 15-foot birdie putt, then hit an 8-iron up the hill on the 17th to about 12 feet right of the pin for this third straight birdie.

"It's a matter of picking and choosing your targets out there," he said. "There are opportunities you have that you can be aggressive, but you have to kind of back down and just give the course respect. Otherwise, it'll hit you pretty quick."

No need to explain that to Sergio Garcia. Playing for the first time since losing the British Open in a playoff, Garcia was at even par for his round when he made the turn at the 18th hole and paid dearly for a risky shot.

He tried to go through a cluster of trees from the left rough, heard it smack a tree, but he never saw where the ball wound up. His group searched 5 minutes for it before the ball was declared lost, a two-shot penalty, and Garcia had to return to the rough. The next one went over the green, over a cement path and next to a villa.

Garcia was given a free drop, but chipped short of the green and missed a 6-foot putt to take quadruple-bogey 8. He wound up with a 77, leaving him 14 shots behind.

Woods didn't do anything that outrageous, although he must have felt like banging his head against the putter. He missed four birdie putts inside 12 feet and wound up with 33 putts for the round. Walking toward the 14th tee, he muttered to caddie Steve Williams that he should have figured the greens out by then, he had just left a 35-foot putt some 6 feet short, making that for par. The grind at this World Golf Championship would seem to be the perfect way to prepare for Southern Hills next week. Or maybe not.

"It just gets to the point where every course is a long, long golf course with deep, deep rough," Love said. "You can't get away with very much and you have to be right on perfect. You miss a fairway, you're hard-pressed to get it back on the green. They keep lengthening courses that are already long. It's tough."

"We see the same basic thing week after week after week. And it's very, very tough on you mentally."

The good news in northern Ohio is it might be slightly cooler. It should be no surprise that Johnson found the conditions to his liking. It stirred memories of the Masters, which was firm and fast and made him pay attention to keeping the ball in play. And lightning-quick greens seem to suit him.

"Augusta ... my game plan really was pretty obvious," Johnson said. "I've got to hit my driver solid and get it in the fairway, just like it is here, and then putt well. I guess for the most part, I tend to putt pretty well on fast greens."

Detroit's Neifi Perez suspended for 80 games

Infielder tests positive for banned stimulant

Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — Detroit Tigers' infielder Neifi Perez was suspended for 80 games Friday after testing positive for a third time for a banned stimulant, a penalty that finishes his season.

Perez was suspended for 25 games on July 6 when he tested positive for a second time. Under baseball's labor contract, a player who tests positive for the first time is sent for counseling.

Perez has been the only player suspended by baseball for stimulants since they were banned before the 2006 season.

His first suspension had been set to end after Friday night's game against the Chicago White Sox, but Tigers president Dave Dombrowski wouldn't say whether Perez would have been restored to the active roster absent the new positive test.

Under baseball's labor contract, a player cannot be disciplined multiple times for a positive test stemming from the same use of a banned substance, meaning Perez had to take a prohibited stimulant more than once.

Another positive test would lead to a suspension to be determined at the discretion of commissioner Bud Selig, with Perez having the right to have an arbitrator review the penalty.

His initial suspension cost him $396,175, and the second will cost him $792,350 — a total of $1,188,525 of his $2.5 million salary. He will miss the final 54 games of the regular season and finish serving the suspension next year, if he is signed.

Because of his initial positive test, Perez is subject to at least six additional tests over the next year.

The 34-year-old Perez is hitting .172 with one homer and six RBIs in 64 at-bats for the defending AL champions. His biggest contribution was when he started a spectacular double play to end the eighth inning of Justin Verlander's no-hitter.

Detroit manager Jim Leyland and Tigers shortstop Carlos Guillen wouldn't discuss Perez before Friday night's game, and Perez's agent, Adam Katz, also declined comment. Dombrowski said Perez had been in Detroit but wasn't sure if he remained in town.

Perez won a Gold Glove at shortstop in 2000 with the Colorado Rockies and also has played for Kansas City, San Francisco and Chicago.

Tampa Bay pitcher Juan Salas has been the only other player suspended this year under the major league testing program, a 50-game penalty announced May 7 following a positive test for a banned performance-enhancing substance. Twenty players have been suspended this year under baseball's minor league program.

ASTROGRAPH

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sunday, Aug. 5, 2007

You can do much to better your lot in life, provided you are mindful of how you go about doing things and don't have too many irons in the fire at one time. Exciting projects can be developed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) -- This is one of those days when you might fail to leave well enough alone and interfere with something that is presently running smoothly. It can cause unnecessary complications for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) -- Even little-known acquaintances will accept you with all of your shortcomings, provided you first show you're prepared to ignore theirs. If not, expect similar treatment in return.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct.

23) -- Once a problematic issue has been resolved, forget about it and let it lie. If you rehash what occurred over and over again, you'll quickly undo all the good you've done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) -- You may not like it, but you are capable of handling difficult developments, so take the time to do a thorough job. If you do only what you can get away with, chances are it will unravel again.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) -- When making changes that involve work or other matters, be sure that what you establish won't create a whole set of new problems down the line. There's a chance it might.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) -- Once you agree upon something, stick by your word instead of changing it the moment you see that things might be going better for others than for you. You'll get your turn later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) -- Should you take it upon yourself to tackle something that needs fixing, be sure you know what you're doing. If you don't, the job may get expensive when you have to call in an expert.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) -- Take extra care when you take it upon yourself to critique others. What you say is more than likely to evoke responses that you won't enjoy hearing because they'll be detrimental to you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) -- Remember your financial means has its limitations, so when purchasing a large-ticket item, go with the model you can live with and forget about the extra bells and whistles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) -- You shouldn't have any trouble getting along with persons who are easygoing and fun to be around. But if someone should make a remark you find distasteful, it'll be a different story.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) -- When others treat you with sensitivity, you're the type of person who will respond in kind. You'll have little patience, however, if you have to deal with someone who is gruff and pushy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) -- It's usual for you to go out of your way to do something nice when others treat you kindly. However, you might step out of character at times and be more of a taker than a giver.

Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph year-ahead predictions by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

Bass

8. He said balancing time between work, fishing and family isn't always the easiest, but it's more than rewarding for him.

"Trying to balance my time is tough," he said. "I need time to practice, and I spend a lot of time preparing for these events. You just have to manage to balance it all."

While Kornegay, who has been fishing for the better part of 12 years now, is now a member of the Future Pro Tour, The Mendo Bassers and sponsored by Lakeport-based tackle shop Tackle It, it hasn't always been easy for him. Kornegay started on the Future Pro Tour in March of this year and he said it's been a learning experience throughout.

"There's a lot of guys who fish around here, and there's a lot of them who are better than I am," he said. "But that doesn't mean it wouldn't be nice to make a living fishing some day."

Kornegay said he got his start as a child fishing for bluegill on Lake Mendocino with his dad. He said after he met his wife his fishing began to increase.

"I started fishing a lot with my wife's dad, and I kind of just branched off from there."

Kornegay, who prefers spinning and heavy tackle, said his first tournament was the biggest learning experience in his career. Fishing in the California Delta against more than 300 other boats, the morning of his first tournament went from bad to worse as his boat ran aground, ruined the motor and he broke two rods, but always remaining calm Kornegay laughs when looking back on the day.

"It (the first tournament) was tough, but at that same time I got that rush; the feeling of seeing that many boats taking off at once is amazing. When I'm having a bad day, I chalk it up to having a bad day. Tournament fishing isn't a very relaxed environment," he said. "When it comes down to crunch time, it's a hard thing to do sometimes. It can stress you out. Fish don't just jump into your boat. It's kind of a primitive feeling."

Primitive or not, Kornegay remains modern in his thinking and makes sure he practices catch-and-release with all the fish he brings into the boat.

Now, almost six months into his first season, he said he is more focused and determined than ever. During a tournament May 5, one of the seven regular season tournaments in the Future Pro Tour, Kornegay and his partner registered their run of the year on Clear Lake, finishing in seventh place out of 150 possible boats. As well, Kornegay and his partner also registered the largest bass of the tournament, weighing in at 9.87 lbs.

With the hope of making bass fishing a career, Kornegay continues to practice and improve his skills. He said he hopes to compete this fall in a few Pro Team events, but much of his priorities remain in Mendocino County.

"I'd really like to open the door for people to join the Mendo Bassers," he said. "The defining moment of my fishing came when I joined the Mendo Bassers. Everyone there wants you to succeed. The simpler you can keep it, the better off you'll be. You don't need thousands of dollars to even -- even competitively."

The Mendo Bassers is a local tournament fishing club that focuses primarily on bass, Kornegay said. The group meets once a month at the Broiler Steak House in Redwood Valley.

Kornegay said the Mendo Bassers rotate their fishing between Pillsbury, Mendocino and Clear lakes throughout the year. The group awards points for each of the tournaments and even presents trophies each year. Kornegay said he looks at the Mendo Bassers as one of the best learning experiences he could ask for.

"Fishing with a club forced me to work in adversity. It makes you adjust the fishing. It's not like you can say 'It's too cold.' But that's how you learn, is from other anglers."

With Kornegay's fishing nothing is certain, but he said he'll have fun just continuing to compete.

People interested in joining the Mendo Bassers can contact Kornegay through e-mail at bassindan@sbcglobal.net. Zack Sampsel can be reached at udjzs@pacific.net.

California wildfire takes on new life

Associated Press

LOS OLIVOS — An evacuation order was issued Friday for rural areas near a huge, month-old forest fire in northern Santa Barbara County as weather conditions that had slowed its advance began to change. Smoke from the distant blaze began to stream over coastal cities to the south.

Some 300 people were ordered from 160 homes in the Paradise Road area, said William Boyer, county communications director. Also evacuated were 300 people from five campgrounds, 75 juveniles and 12 staff members from Los Prietos Boys Camp, and an unknown number from an RV camp.

No homes were immediately threatened, Boyer said, but evacuation was ordered because "the way the fire is moving we want to give them enough time to get out."

Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger, who was in the area, declared a state of emergency in the county to free up state resources to fight the fire. As of Friday morning, the fire had been estimated to have burned 38,000 acres.

THREE-VEHICLE COLLISION

MacLeod Pappidas/The Daily Journal

Two people were transported to Ukiah Valley Medical Center on complaints of pain following a three-vehicle accident in the 1000 block of North State Street about 2:45 p.m. Friday. According to police reports, a dark blue Buick LeSabre was turning into the parking lot of New Release Video when it was rear-ended by a Chevy Suburban, causing the Buick to collide with a white Honda CRV that was leaving the parking lot. The Ukiah Police Department and the Ukiah Fire Department responded to the crash.

She was hit four times and died in the emergency room.

Flitcroft said he went to retrieve his gun the night of the party because, moments before, he had been attacked by three people in the driveway of his house and felt threatened.

"It was after this," Flitcroft said, indicating his wounded face. "I felt threatened in my own house."

During the interview, Flitcroft said he was walking the three men out to their car when they attacked him. He said he was upset with them because they had been flirting with girls at the party, including Syfert.

"She's just friendly, not the type to blow someone off, but there's a point to which that's ridiculous," Flitcroft said of Syfert.

He said he was not angry with Syfert and not jealous of the attention she gave to the three men.

Flitcroft said he had his hand on the shoulder of one of the men when he was hit in the face, and then all three of them attacked him, he said.

Syfert's family intervened and Flitcroft said he went into the house, got the gun out from under his bed, took it out of the holster and walked outside.

"After that it's all a blur," Flitcroft said.

"I just lost it, lost it, lost it," he said.

On the video, Flitcroft said he didn't mean to hurt anyone, he said he only wanted to scare them.

"I wasn't trying to kill anybody; I wasn't trying to hurt anybody," he said.

Flitcroft told police officers he thought he fired at the ground.

According to police reports, Flitcroft fired the Ruger 9 mm handgun seven times, hitting Syfert four times and another man, Rudy Flores, once, grazing him in the arm.

Other guests at the party tackled Flitcroft, and he said one of them told him he had shot Syfert.

On the video, Flitcroft appeared shocked and incredulous when Schnitzes told him Syfert had died.

"This is a f---ing nightmare," Flitcroft said on the video.

"My girlfriend, who I love and want to marry, is dead," he said.

Defense Attorney Anne Moorman does not deny Flitcroft shot Syfert, but said that he did not mean to shoot her and, in fact, did not see her as a result of darkness, alcohol consumption and confusion caused by the injuries he sustained in the fight.

Witnesses for the prosecution have testified that Flitcroft was the aggressor in that fight and that he was not badly hurt until after he shot Syfert and was attacked by other guests at the party.

Testimony is scheduled to continue Monday.
